

"The textile industry involves all of society from local to global - from consumers to producers, artisans, businesses, designers, communicators, among others. It builds dreams and profits, but is also responsible for modern slavery and the second most contaminating industry in the world. For this reason, it's one of the most impactful spaces to work to transform the contemporary world"

Adriana Marina, founder of Hecho por Nosotros, and b corp social enterprise animaná

animaná

animaná is a clothing, accessories and home accessories brand that gathers ancestral techniques of weaving with contemporary designs using natural fibers from the Andes to create sustainable luxury products.

FEBRUARY 14th 2019

15:00-16:15 PM

United Nations Headquarters, New York, Conference room CR A

This event will address the most pressing social, economic, and environmental challenges in the textile industry. A panel of experts in the field of sustainable fashion will address its current problems as well as potential solutions, including impact investing, sustainability and human rights initiatives, trade policies, technological interventions, and inclusive business practices.

The panel is organized by the Asociación Civil Hecho por Nosotros, an Argentine NGO with ECOSOC consultative status working towards a more sustainable textile industry.

Participation is free of charge.
